I. Read the passage and answer the questions that follow:

Naina was not an ordinary collector. While other children collected stamps, coins, or comic books, Naina collected forgotten stories. During her summer break, she visited elderly people in her neighbourhood every evening. She listened carefully as they shared memories of their childhood, village fairs, old traditions, historical events, and family legends passed down through generations. Some stories were joyful, while others were filled with struggles and courage.

Naina carried a blue notebook called 'Voices of Time.' She wrote down every detail neatly, making sure she did not miss even the smallest memory. Sometimes, she also drew little sketches beside the stories. The older people were happy that someone was interested in listening to them. Many said they had never shared these memories before.

One rainy afternoon, an old woman told Naina about how people in the past helped one another during difficult times. That story touched Naina deeply. By the end of summer, her notebook was completely full. As she flipped through its pages, Naina realized she had done something meaningful. She had not only collected stories—she had preserved precious memories and emotions that may have disappeared forever.

i. What made Naina's collection unusual?

ii. What was 'Voices of Time'?

iii. Why were Naina's efforts important?
